People First Language

When writing or speaking about people with disabilities, words should be chosen with care in order to promote dignity. It is more respectful to focus on the person first rather than his or her disability. For example, rather than saying "the disabled," say "a person with a disability," and rather than saying, "afflicted with blindness," say "a person who is blind." To be considered for an award, Open Hearts entries must use people first language.

Open Hearts Award Grant Request

Describe how, if chosen a winner, the Open Hearts Award of up to $1,000 will help the congregation to expand inclusion efforts. Please attach your request to this entry form.

Essay, Artwork or Computer Presentation

Children are strongly encouraged to complete the "Different Gifts, But the Same Spirit" lesson for their age level before creating an essay (no more that 2 pages in length), drawing or computer presentation depicting how their place of worship welcomes people of all abilities. Parents or teachers may facilitate the entry process or children may create entries on their own. The "Different Gifts, But the Same Spirit" lesson plans and teacher guides are available at www.pathwaysawareness.org/open_educators.
